

PERMANENT PAVEMENTS

Campaign For Street Im- provements On Foot

COMMITTEES ARE APPOINTED

To Meet Next Tuesday Ev- ening, Discuss Methods of Paving and Plan Can- vass of Property Owners in Old Corporation

Deciding that Phoenix wants no more temporary makeshifts, the special committee appointed by Mayor Christy Wednesday evening yesterday selected a number of sub-committees to canvass all owners of property within the original corporation, arouse sentiment and make arrangements to have the cost of permanent paving defrayed by the property holders themselves, each paying his share computed on a front foot basis.

It seemed to the special committee that the time to agitate permanent paving had come. Before the members met numerous citizens had spoken to them in opposition to the plan for temporary street improvements and expressing their willingness to contribute their share toward the cost of pavement that would last for all time. Since the meeting scores of property owners have voiced their approval of the committee's action in starting a campaign for streets of which Phoenix may well be proud.

There has been some discussion of late of a scheme to oil and gravel the streets at a cost of one dollar a linear foot, and it was to advance this proposition that Mayor Christy appointed the special committee. But the committee scarcely discussed temporary pavements at all, devoting all its time to an enthusiastic discussion of permanent streets and selecting the proper committees to bring action at the earliest possible moment. There was no talk of a bond issue, not one person present doubting that a sufficient number of property owners are willing to stand their share of the expense to carry the idea through to a successful consummation.

The committee consists of Councilmen Hackett and Stauffer, Eugene Brady O'Neill, Louis Melzer, H. J. McClung, M. C. McDougall and C. H. Akers. They met yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in the office of Mr. O'Neill, Street Commissioner O. H. Christy, City Engineer O. E. Turney and Councilman Dan McDermott also attended the session.

Never was there a more enthusiastic gathering of Phoenix citizens. Paved streets—streets paved in such a way that they will last practically forever and give Phoenix the right to call herself a city in every sense of the word was the idea uppermost in the mind of everyone.

No half-hearted campaign for a few blocks of paving, merely by way of experiment, was proposed. All realized that nothing could be gained by going about the matter in a weak-kneed fashion. It was recognized that if Phoenix is to have paved streets some hard blows must be struck. There will be work to do, but the popular state of mind is now ripe for paving and the task will not be nearly as hard as it was in the past.

No idea of failure is in the minds of one member of the special committee. The earnest manner in which they have gone about obtaining paved streets for Phoenix presages success. A committee of four for every block in the old corporation, headed by Seventh street, Seventh avenue, Jackson and Van Buren streets, was appointed. About 150 citizens are on these sub-committees and from among the number sufficient earnest workers should be secured to make the day when Phoenix will have streets as good as any city in the country a certainty of the immediate future.

Next Tuesday night, at 7 o'clock, the committees will meet at the city hall. The different systems of street paving will then be discussed and other committees will be appointed from among the number present to attend to various phases of the business in hand.
